

That Bed Sheet Hanging in Como

EXTRAIT

LUCKRUNS

There was a window left open in a house that wasn't yours. It's clean, it's old, it's serene. A bed sheet on the line, it's white, still damp, lifting and falling with the breath of the lake. The morning had not yet decided what to be. Cucumber from a garden you didn't plant. Lemon from a tree that belonged to someone's grandmother. Tea steeping in a kitchen you could hear but not see. The rose was the kind that grows where no one tends it; wild, almost shy. Sometimes you cannot tell if you stayed in Como or only dreamt that you did. The sheet hung there either way.

The smell of it is what remained.

*Cucumber Kiwi Lemon Sea Salt
Magnolia Lily of the Valley Rose White Tea
Musk Sandalwood Sweet Balsamic Frankincense*

LUCKRUNS

LUCKRUNS

PARFUM

That Bed Sheet Hanging in Como

LUCKRUNS #6 made for by